I took SeeSaw Signing with my daughter when she was 6 months old. We learned so many useful signs though I just used about a dozen regularly at home. When my daughter was about 9 or 10 months old she began signing to me and it was great that she could actually communicate! She is now 18 months and is talking but can be hard to understand; since she signs when she talks it makes it easier to decipher "more" from "milk".

Thanks,
Ann

I just wanted to thank you for the class we took from you back in the summer. We started signing consistently with our daughter after we took your class, and within about a month or so she actually signed back her first sign. It was slow at the beginning for her to add signs, but then all of a sudden she really took off and now she knows I'd say at least 20-30 signs. It's been great to communicate with her on that level, and I just can't imagine not signing with a child of this age! It's been so helpful!

We thoroughly enjoyed the class and will recommend it to everyone I know with babies. You were a great teacher and I loved that we did review each time to help reinforce what we learned.

Lydia loves to play tea party with her animals and friends. The other day when we were playing with her toy Elmo, she "helped" Elmo request some tea by using her signs. Elmo signed "please" and "more" for some more tea, and then "thank you" for when it was poured. Since Elmo isn't able to speak, I think Lydia wanted to help him with the signs, so that he could get his tea. It was adorable!

I have been meaning to reach out for quite sometime and tell you how thoroughly impressed J. and I were with your level 1 class! We both absolutely loved it and thanks to you, her expressive signing abilities really kicked in around her 1 year birthday in October (she'll be 15 months on Jan 8.) She is beginning to put two word sign combinations together now and I am modeling more of that. She expressively, and spontaneously signed hurt or owie a few months ago while on her changing table. I immediately recalled the story you told me about the child who was able to tell the doctor where he was hurt due to his sign vocabulary. So, I said to her - where are you hurt? Where is the owie? She pointed to her bookcase. At first I was confused, but she was determined in signing hurt and then pointing to her bookcase. On an upper shelf she has a ceramic music box that she likes and it had fallen a few weeks back and some pieces broke off but I had the pieces there to super glue back together. A-ha! I had figured it out! The music box was hurt. She was absolutely right and she continued to talk about this for days even signing bunny and then hurt, because it was a Peter rabbit music box. Needless to say we have fixed it now and she will sign hurt and then shake her head no as if to say no longer hurt. She consistently signs please, more, milk, dance, music, play, done, bed, Mama, daddy ( although she says these now) book, bath, wet, diaper, dolly, swing, funny and many animals and others. I really need to increase my sign vocabulary now. .

Thank you again for sharing your knowledge and sign talents with us and other families. What a gift it has been to see our little infant daughter communicate so effectively. She is so proud of herself too.

My favorite story is how our son, Phoenix made up his own signs for all the songs he wanted us to sing. Some were elaborate, some were simple, but he still (2 years old) uses these signs to represent his favorite songs!
